microeconomics and why macroeconomics does not supervene on microeconomics - arguments for the compatibility of supervenience with non-reducibility are by now familiar enough that they have become the default route for skepticism about reduction. many anti-reductionists about macroeconomics, in fact, emphasize the supervenience of macroeconomics on microeconomics, on their way to pointing out that supervenience does not entail reducibility. for instance, hoover 1995 ... why macroeconomics does not microfoundations of macroeconomics is important to heterodox economics. in this essay, i argue that the controversy is due to misspecification. that is, the conventional understanding of the controversy is that it is a reductionist exercise of macroeconomics to mainstream microeconomics. however, mainstream microeconomics is theoretically incoherent ... economía informa of heterodox macroeconomics - "microfoundations of heterodox macroeconomics". often they entirely dismiss the issue because it has the appearance of being like the mainstream reductionist research program of reducing macroeconomics entirely to microeconomics. but when it is not dismissed, the foundations are often located entirely in current mainstream microeconomic theory or in its marshallian variant. other times ... munich personal rep ec
